

INCREDIBLE YEARS

Carolyn Webster-Stratton is the sole developer of The Incredible Years programs

Any and all translations of IY materials/programs are arranged through a contract with Incredible Years. We maintain the right to allow or refuse a translation to be made. Our contracts typically stipulate that the translation is either done through our translation company here or through an equally reputable translation company (we will have final say on translation company in order to maintain quality assurance). If it is NOT done through our normal translation company we require items to be sent to us for back translation.

If a program has been translated (for example, the Russian Preschool Basic we are finalizing right now), any agency may purchase the program and use it. The translated program has the same protections as the English programs - all material is copyright protected and is therefore not allowed to be altered or redistributed. This would be included in the translation contract.

Use of materials from IY website and printed materials: All the handouts provided in your manual are black line masters and you are allowed to make photocopies for purposes of distributing to the parents in your group. The same goes for any of the materials we provide free of charge for download on our website. We do NOT authorize altering the materials in any way (they must be used "as is" unless you receive prior written consent from IY), and you must maintain all the copyright information that is on the material. You may not resell any of the handouts/materials or redistribute for profit in any way. They are to be used solely with your implementation of the Incredible Years groups.
